GALT HOUSE HISTORY

The Galt House Hotel has a storied history dating back to January 1865 when the original hotel was tragically destroyed by fire. A second Galt House, designed by architect Henry Whitestone, was constructed a block away from the original site in November 1869 at a cost of $1.5 million. However, by 1919, changes in the city's business and cultural landscape led to the closure of the second Galt House. It was demolished in 1921.

In the early 1970s, local developer Al J. Schneider envisioned revitalizing Louisville's waterfront area and opened the Galt House Hotel, initially with one tower, in 1972. Schneider further expanded the hotel by opening the East Tower in 1984, creating the distinctive two-tower structure. This new addition primarily featured suites, offering guests even more spacious accommodations.

In 2004, the hotel enhanced its facilities by replacing a simple walkway between the towers with the magnificent 3rd Floor Conservatory. This steel and glass enclosed lounge, inspired by the Crystal Palace in London, now houses the Conservatory Bar and Thelma's Deli, named after the hotel founders wife. Additionally, it serves as a tribute to naturalist John James Audubon, a friend of Dr. W.C. Galt.

In April 2018, the Galt House Hotel embarked on a significant $80 million renovation project, which included the refurbishment and redecoration of rooms, updates to lobbies, modernization of meeting and social spaces, and the introduction of new restaurants and bars. This renovation aimed to elevate the guest experience and ensure the Galt House remains a premier destination in Louisville as Louisville's Only Waterfront Hotel™.
